Post-Liberal (or Post-European?) Russia — Her Problems With Capitalism And Her Problems With Democracy

Vortrag von Alexei Miller

— In the late 1980s/early 1990s Russians in their majority believed in capitalism as the most effective and fair economic system, in democracy as the only possible political system and in a close relationship with Western democracies as a solution to all of Russia's problems. By the end of the 1990s none of their beliefs survived. How did this value crisis develop? How was it linked to dramatic moves in Russian politics between 2012 and 2016? What makes us speak about post-European Russia, and what does this definition mean? Is there a future for democracy and capitalism in post-European Russia?

Prof. Dr. Alexei Miller, Historiker; Professor am Department of History der European University at St. Petersburg

Vortrag im Rahmen der Frühjahrstagung des Arbeitskreises für Moderne Sozialgeschichte im Hamburger Institut für Sozialforschung

Ort: Hamburger Institut für Sozialforschung, Mittelweg 36, 20148 Hamburg
